

What can I do with a History degree?

Staff training	Markets Analysis
Travel & tourism	Technical Librarian
Military Historical Services	Law
Intelligence Services	Market research
National Park Service	Newspaper journalism
Elected Offices	Radio & TV journalism
Legislative Administrative assistants	Paralegal services
Consulting Assignments	Insurance
Museum Curator	Freelance Assignments
Investment services	Archives management
Advertising	Records management
Magazine editor	Cultural Resource management
Management positions	Historical Research/writing/editing
Banking services	Legal & policy research
Book editor	Preservation/restoration

In addition to appointments within the U.S. government, the non-profit sector offers a wide array of professional positions in:

- research administration
  - education exhibition design
- History majors in particular are well-suited for appointments within the following institutions:
- historical commissions, associations and societies
  - scholarly and professional associations
  - galleries and museums
  - colleges and universities
  - research foundations and institutional “think tanks”
  - service institutions.